Central Avian Research Institute

Central Avian Research Institute (CARI) came into existence on 2nd November 1979 by combining the PRD and the Co-ordination Unit of AICRP on Poultry Breeding. Since its inception, the institute has been significantly contributing in the development and progress of Indian Poultry Sector and emerged as the premier institute on poultry research in Indian sub-continent. Presently, its main campus is located at Izatnagar, Bareilly (U.P.) and the regional center at Blubaneswar (Odisha). The institute has indigenously developed poultry germplasm and dual purpose crosses for backyard poultry but also enriched the poultry resource basket of the country by releasing high yielding varieties of Ducks, Turkey, Japanese Quail and Guinea Fowl.
